During his career at ECU, he taught numerous courses in voice and diction, public speaking, broadcast announcing, audio production and business-professional speech.

In addition to teaching on campus, Jim performed and narrated in numerous dramatic and musical productions at ECU. For many years, he was Lord of the Manor at the popular Christmas Madrigal Dinner series on campus.

Pool that inspired 'Pride' closed

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The pool that helped inspire a movie about an inner-city swim team and its dedicated coach has been closed indefinitely because of serious disrepair.

Marcus Foster Pool was where aquatics coach Jim Ellis — played by actor Terrence Howard in the 2007 film "Pride" — turned hundreds of Philadelphia children into competitive swimmers.

But the city school district, which owns the 28-year-old pool, closed the facility last week, citing concerns about its deterioration.

The move infuriated Ellis, who said the district created situation by failing to properly maintain the pool for years.

"I know swimming pools are expensive to maintain, but in a city the size of Philadelphia, you can't complain you need programs to get kids off the street and then ignore a program that for 30 years has been extremely successful in doing that," said Ellis, an employee of the city recreation department.

The Foster pool and three others are closed because they need "millions of dollars" worth of repairs and improvements, district spokesman Vincent Thompson said.

"We don't want to deny anyone the opportunity to use any of our facilities for sports and recreation," Thompson said. "But the School District of Philadelphia has precious (few) resources in our budget, and the core of our mission is to educate children."

Administrators plan to discuss the problem with city officials with an eye on "shared resources," Thompson said.

Since "Pride" came out, Ellis has toured the country as a motivational speaker. He also continues to coach, but said his competitive program — which once had about 300 kids — is down to just 20.

As Foster pool fell into disrepair, Ellis said, fewer kids wanted to swim there. The program now practices at nearby La Salle University.

Cardinal who led campaign against abortion dies

VATICAN CITY (AP)—Cardinal Alfonso Lopez Trujillo, a Colombian prelate who helped lead the Vatican's campaign against abortion and insisted condoms do not prevent HIV transmission, has died, one of his assistants said Sunday. He was 72.

Lopez Trujillo died Saturday night at the Pius XI private clinic in Rome, where he had been admitted for tests on March 17, Monsignor Jorge Raigosa said.

He died after suffering cardiac arrest following medical complications over several weeks that had put the cardinal in intensive care at times, said Raigosa, who declined to elaborate.

Vatican Radio said the cardinal had been hospitalized for "grave health problems."

In March 2007, Lopez Trujillo traveled to Mexico to launch the Roman Catholic Church's aggressive campaign against plans in the predominantly Catholic country to legalize abortion. Catholic teaching forbids abortion as a grave sin.

The cardinal inaugurated an international anti-abortion conference in Mexico City by celebrating Mass in the Basilica of the Virgin of Guadalupe, the most important Catholic shrine in the Americas.

The next month, the Mexico City assembly passed a measure legalizing abortion in the capital during the first 12 weeks of pregnancy. Opponents appealed the law, and Mexico's Supreme Court is reviewing it.

Lopez Trujillo also made headlines in 2003 for saying that condoms do not prevent HIV transmission. He contended that condoms may even help spread the virus by creating a false sense of security.

The World Health Organization, among others, called the cardinal's message "totally wrong" and said condoms are 90 percent effective when used correctly.

Priests for Life, an organization that seeks to end abortion and euthanasia, hailed Lopez Trujillo as "one of the Church's strongest advocates for the dignity of the human person and the family."

Born in 1935 in Villahermosa, Colombia, Lopez Trujillo moved with his family when he was a young boy to the capital, Bogota. While a university student, he decided to attend a seminary and later received a philosophy degree from Rome's prestigious Angelicum university.

Lopez Trujillo was ordained a priest in 1960 and made a bishop in 1971 by Pope Paul VI. He later headed the Latin American bishops' conference, CELAM.

He will be missed by many.

Don; a sister, Helen Salzman. He was preceded in death by: his first wife, Jane Herr Brubaker; a son, Ronald Brubaker; two brothers, Adam Freund, Jim Brubaker; a granddaughter, Cassandra Kieley.

Friends and family are invited to a memorial service at Faith E.C. Church, 2124 Old Philadelphia Pike, Lancaster PA 17602 on Friday, Apr. 25th at 10 a.m. There will be no viewing; however, the family will visit with friends after the service. Private interment of ashes will be in the Riverview Burial Park. Kindly omit flowers. Memorials welcomed to the church or the Water Street Rescue Mission, PO Box 7267, Lancaster PA 17604-7267. Pittsburgh mayor to meet slots developer

PITTSBURGH (AP)—Pittsburgh Mayor Luke Ravenstahl is adamant a slots parlor developer keeps a promise to revitalize a city neighborhood.

Ravenstahl says he plans to meet with Majestic Star developer Don Barden.

Barden's company asked the Pennsylvania Gaming Board for permission to eliminate a $3 million commitment to redevelop the city's Hill District. Barden offered the money in 2006 as part of his bid to win the Pittsburgh slots license.

Barden says his company changed course because the city and Allegheny County gave the Pittsburgh Penguins authority to develop land once the team's new arena is built in the Hill District.

Barden's slots parlor is being built elsewhere in the city. It is scheduled to open in May 2009.
