I miss you when I go to bed at night and when I wake up in the morning. I miss you when the seasons change. I miss your hugs, kisses and your smiles. I miss the thousands of things we did together. I just plain miss you! I'll love you forever.

Your loving wife,

In Loving Memory of Ray E. Young July 8, 1947 - April 12, 2006

Dear Dad,
It's been two years now since we said "Goodbye". But it seems like yesterday as I continue to cry.

If I had only known how it was going to end, more time with my father I would have been willing to spend. I really miss the sound of your blowing snow, and the Orioles playing on your AM radio; and your knocks on my door and a "Hello son"; with your pager on your side always ready to run. You had made a life of helping someone in need, with a passion in your heart to do a good deed.

To your grandson and granddaughter I make your memory live on, through the eyes of your son you will never be gone!

Missing you dearly,
your son Tony

Advice for the first-time oil-changer

Dear Tom and Ray:

My mom listens to your show constantly, and I have to say, it's a whole lot better than when she listens to Rush Limbaugh.

Anyway, I've decided having the car fall on you is to invest in a set of ramps. For 30 bucks or so, you can get a set of steel ramps, and someone can show you how to drive the front wheels up onto the ramps so the car is secure and you have room to work underneath.

TOM: Whatever you do, do not use the spare-tire jack that came with your car. It's flimsy, and it's not safe to work under. If you don't believe me, look at a picture of my forehead.

I use it to deliver mail for the U.S. Postal Service. One day I refilled my antifreeze, and a week later, it was empty. This past week I put in two gallons, and now it's empty again. There's nothing on my driveway, so the car's not leaking. So, where is all of that antifreeze going? Please help. — James

TOM: It's going air mail, James. It's getting burned up in your engine and sent, first class, out the tailpipe.

His funeral will be held on Tuesday, April 15, at 10 a.m. at the Churchtown United Methodist Church with Pastor Robert Pope officiating. Interment will be in the United Methodist Cemetery of Churchtown. A viewing will be held on Monday from 6-8 p.m. at the Beck Funeral Home, 315 E. Main St., New Holland, and at the Church on Tuesday from 9-10 a.m. To send the family condolences, visit us at:

Edith M. Matz, 86, of Adamstown, entered into rest on Friday, April 11, 2008. She was born in White Plains, NY. Her husband, Robert K. Matz, died in 1973. She retired in 1986 from Kawecki-Berylco of Temple.

Edith was a member of Mohn's Memorial E.C. Church, the Cocalico Senior Assoc., and graduated from Reading High School in 1939. She enjoyed traveling, knitting, gardening, flowers and singing hymns of faith.

Surviving are her children, Robert W. Matz, Hephizba, GA, Donald L. (Debbie) Matz, Port Charlotte, FL, Sherri L. (Sam) Anastasio, Millerton, PA, and David R. (Theresa) Matz, Adamstown; 10 grandchildren and 5 great grandchildren. Edith was predeceased by 2 sisters, Georgia Leisey and Anna Walter.

Services will be at the convenience of the family. Contributions in Edith's memory may be made to Mohn's Memorial E.C. Church Benevolence Fund, 708 Mohn's Hill Rd., Sinking Spring, PA 19608. www.rosebo-rofuneralhome.com listens to your show constantly, and I have to say, it's a whole lot better than when she listens to Rush Limbaugh.

Anyway, I've decided to change my own oil, as I have a part-time job delivering pizzas, and I hate shelling out $50 every three months or so. I've done some research online, and what I've found is scary — between risking getting crushed by a mislaid car jack and burnt by a hot engine, I'm ready to rethink my plan. What are your expert opinions on the safety of an oil change by a first-time do-it-yourselfer? — Katie TOM: Well, a lot of people learn things successfully by just jumping right in and trying them. That's how I learned to change oil, Katie.

RAY: And he's had cars fall on him many times, which explains both the extreme flatness of his forehead and his frequent lapses in judgment.

TOM: No, the lapses in judgment are what led to the flat forehead! Anyway, it's best if you can get someone to actually show you how to do an oil change, because you can get hurt under a car, Katie.

RAY: The best way to avoid steel ramps, and someone can show you how to drive the front wheels up onto the ramps so the car is secure and you have room to work underneath.

TOM: Whatever you do, do not use the spare-tire jack that came with your car. It's flimsy, and it's not safe to work under. If you don't believe me, look at a picture of my forehead.

RAY: Once the car is on the ramps on flat ground, you need to make sure it stays there. You do that by putting the transmission in park (or in first or reverse if it's a stick-shift), applying the parking brake and chocking the rear wheels (again, someone can show you how to do this very easily).

TOM: Once you get underneath the car, someone can show you where the exhaust manifold is, so you don't touch that and burn yourself. And he or she can show you how to remove the oil filter without having a quart of oil run down your arm and into your lap, where it gets absorbed by your Jockey shorts. You'll also need to know how to dispose of the used oil properly so you don't get fined $50,000 by the Environmental Protection Agency. After you've seen it done once, you'll be able to do it yourself.

RAY: Yup. It's not that hard, and I don't think it's beyond your capabilities once you get a little instruction.

TOM: I agree. If you can deliver a triple-anchovy pizza before it gets cold, you can change your own oil, Katie. Go for it.

Dear Tom and Ray:
I have a 2001 Chrysler Town & Country with a 3.3-liter V-6 engine and 134,000 miles on it.

week later, it was empty. This past week I put in two gallons, and now it's empty again. There's nothing on my driveway, so the car's not leaking. So, where is all of that antifreeze going? Please help. — James

TOM: It's going air mail, James. It's getting burned up in your engine and sent, first class, out the tailpipe.

RAY: There's a small possibility that it is leaking, even though there's nothing in your driveway. Sometimes a leaky water pump, for instance, will drip only when the engine is running. In that case, you've been leaving a few drops at every mailbox every day.

TOM: Actually, it's unlikely that you'd leak out two gallons in a week without seeing anything. But check for a puddle in your driveway after the engine's been idling there for half an hour or so, just to be sure.

RAY: If you don't see any evidence of an external leak, then the coolant is leaking inside the engine. If you get someone else to drive the car, and you drive behind it, you'll probably see voluminous clouds of white smoke coming out the tailpipe. Or, if you check your oil dipstick, you may find it overfilled and frothy. That means coolant's mixing with your oil.

TOM: This is something you want to get checked out soon, while there's still hope of saving the engine, James. And if you need a new engine, maybe you can get a deal on having one mailed to you!
