'French Connection' author dies

HOPKINSVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Robin Moore, a nonfiction author best known for writing "The French Connection" and "The Green Berets," has died after a long illness. He was 82.

Moore died Thursday night at a hospital in southwestern Kentucky, said Dennis Monroy with Lamb Funeral Home.

Born Robert L. Moore Jr. (Oct. 31, 1925, in Massachusetts) he wrote several books under the name Robin Moore.

"The French Connection" published in 1969, was about New York drug bust. It inspired a movie that won five Academy Awards in 1971, including best picture.

"The Green Berets," published in 1965, was made into a movie starring John Wayne in 1968. Moore also co-wrote "The Ballad of the Green Berets," which became the signature song of the Special Force unit.

Moore spent time in Vietnam with the 5th Special Forces Group (Airborne) to write the book, and his connection with the Green Berets endured after the book was written.

In 2005 he and his wife Helen, moved to Hopkinsville which borders Fort Campbell the sprawling Army post that is headquarters to a Green Beret group.

Maj. Gen. Gary L. Harrel deputy commander of the Army's Special Operations Command at Fort Bragg, called Moore a "devoted advocate for the Special Forces and said his writings became textbooks for the Army's unconventional forces.

A lesson in backfiring, boys will be boys

Dear Tom and Ray:

In the 1960s, when I was an adolescent male, one of my friends told me that he could get his old car (late-1940s- or early-1950s-era) to "fart" whenever he liked. When I expressed skepticism about this claim, he demonstrated

RAY: When you turned the ignition back on, that first spark would ignite not only the fuel in the cylinder, but also all the fuel sitting in the exhaust system too. And, kaboom!

TOM: We have a friend, whom we won't name, but Tony had a job during college returning rental cars to the airport in Boston. To get to the airport, you had to drive through a tunnel.

RAY: And Tony II, the friend we won't name, knew how to make the car backfire. He ies designed this way? Is this corrosion treatment worth it? — Art

RAY: We see a lot of batteries with a little bit of corrosion at the terminals. But if there's a lot of buildup there, it could signal a problem.

TOM: Right. Batteries and charging systems that are functioning properly don't create mountains of whitish-blue crud on battery terminals.

RAY: So you could pay this guy $20 to take care of it for you. Or, if you prefer, you can 2008 at the Hickory House Nursing Home, following an illness.

He was born on July 5, 1911 in Honey Brook, Pa. and was the son of the late William D. & Bessie (Styer) Ronk. He was the husband of the late Erma B. (Blank) Ranck, who died in Oct. of 2000. At the time of her death, they were married for 65 years.

Jim was a self employed truck driver from 1935 to 1956. He then worked at Dependable Motor Co. of Honey Brook. In 1958, he opened Ranck's Garage in Honey Brook, which he retired from in 1972. During his retirement, he was a self employed used car salesman.

He attended the Honey Brook Methodist Church.

He was preceded in death by 3 brothers, Theodore Ronk, William & John Ranck and 2 sisters, Annabelle Black and Mary Simpson.

Jim is survived by a brother, Paul E. Ronk of Mission, TX, a sister-in-law, Esther Simmons of New Holland, Pa. and dear friends, Edward & Edith Martini of Honey Brook, Pa.

A graveside service will be held on Tuesday, February 26, 2008 at 3 PM at the Honey Brook Methodist Cemetery. There will be no further service or viewing held for Mr. Ranck.

In lieu of flowers, memorial contributions may be made in the memory of Jim to the Honey Brook United Methodist Church, PO Box 178, Honey Brook, Pa. 19344-0178.

Arrangements by The Labs Funeral Home, Inc. of Honey Brook, Pa.

Brook, he was the son of the late Daniel & Hannah King Zook and was the husband for 60 years of Grace Keller Zook of Lititz.

He served in the U.S. Army during World War II stationed throughout Europe and in Greenland. Moses was a member of the Lititz United Methodist Church and a lifetime member of American Legion Post #56 of Lititz. Years ago, he volunteered with the Lititz Fire Department and Lititz Ambulance.

Retiring in 1985 from Armstrong World Industries, he worked as an assistant superintendent in the Inlaid Department.

Surviving in addition to his wife are daughters, Dianne K. Urban and Audrey K. Zook of Lititz; grandchildren, Shelly, Jennifer, and Michael, husband of Steph Urban; Great grandchildren, Jasmine, Tyson and Jordan; Sisters, Sara Brackbill of New Holland, Mary King, Honey Brook; Betsy, wife of Ben Fisher, Honey Brook; and a brother, Gideon Zook of Lancaster.

Funeral services will be held on Monday, February 25, 2008, at 10:30 A.M. at Hoffer Auditorium, Pleasant View Retirement Community, 544 N. Peryn Rd., Manheim, preceded by a viewing one hour prior to the service. Burial will be in St. John's Lutheran Cemetery, Brickerville. Contributions may be made in his memory to the Alzheimer's Assoc., 3544 N. Progress Ave., Suite 205, Harrisburg, PA 17110-9368. On-line condolences:

of my friends told me that he could get his old car (late-1940s- or early-1950s-era) to "fart" whenever he liked. When I expressed skepticism about this claim, he demonstrated the phenomenon several times. By switching the ignition on and off while manipulating the foot pedals, he could make the car backfire with a spectacular farting sound that attracted the awe and admiration of any adolescents in the vicinity. I still don't understand how he accomplished this impressive feat, however. Can you explain the mechanics of "car farting" for arrested adolescents like me? — Bill

RAY: Sure, Bill. How did you know we'd be the people to ask?

TOM: Before we explain how it's done, let me assure any parents of adolescent boys out there that this won't work nowadays. It only works on carbureted cars, and every single car made now is fuel-injected.

RAY: What your friend was doing was causing a backfire, Bill. We called it "banging." When you turned the key off in an old car (before fuel injection and before steering-wheel locks!), the carburetor would continue to allow gasoline to pour into the cylinders.

TOM: That gasoline didn't get combusted, because the spark plugs weren't firing, so it got pushed out into the exhaust system, where it basically sat, waiting for something to hap-system too. And, kaboom!

TOM: We have a friend, whom we won't name, but Tony had a job during college returning rental cars to the airport in Boston. To get to the airport, you had to drive through a tunnel.

RAY: And Tony II, the friend we won't name, knew how to make the cars backfire. He found it particularly satisfying to "bang" the returning rental cars in the tunnel, where they made a tremendous noise.

TOM: He also discovered, to his chagrin, that when he "banged" a Rambler, which was one of the cars in the rental fleet, not only did it make an impressive noise, but sometimes it also blew the entire muffler right off!

RAY: So he would pull into the rental lot with the car sounding like a Gatling gun, and the supervisor would say: "What the heck happened, Tony? Another bad muffler?" And Tony would say "Yeah. What a piece of junk, huh?"

TOM: So if anyone from Hertz wants to get in touch with Tony now to seek redress, let us know. We know how to reach him.

Dear Tom and Ray:
There is a fluffy white/blue deposit at the base of the positive-terminal post of my battery. The service manager's explanation is: This is perfectly normal for a sealed battery. When a battery is charged, gas escapes from a small gap between the post and the battery case and forms the deposit. The service manager recommended "corrosion treatment" for about $20. Are all batter-a lot of buildup there, it could signal a problem.

TOM: Right. Batteries and charging systems that are functioning properly don't create mountains of whitish-blue crud on battery terminals.

RAY: So you could pay this guy $20 to take care of it for you. Or, if you prefer, you can clean it yourself. You just mix up a cupful of baking soda and water, to the consistency of watery pancake batter.

TOM: Then slather it all over the terminals. It attacks the corrosion, and then you wash it all off with a hose or a bucket of water.

RAY: We also use a spray you can buy at an auto-parts store that coats the clean terminals and prevents the corrosion from coming back — kind of.

TOM: If there's something wrong with your battery or charging system, the corrosion will come back despite the spray. So, then you'll need to investigate.

RAY: The most likely culprit is an alternator that's overcharging — like we do all the time at the shop — and causing your battery to out-gas.

TOM: So, Art, I'd clean off the terminals, resecure the connections and then keep an eye on it. And if the stuff comes back in a couple of months, put the 20 bucks you saved toward a complete charging-system check.

Mystery novelist Marlowe dies

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (A) — Novelist Stephen Marlowe best known for a series of books featuring private detective Chester Drum, died Friday at a hospital after a long illness, his family said in a statement. He was 79.

Marlowe began his career as a writer of pulp and science fiction and wrote more than 50 novels. His series featuring Chester Drum began with "The Second Longest Night" in 1951 and concluded with "Drumbeat Marianne" in 1968. His more recent work included fictionalized biographies, including "The Memoirs of Christopher Columbus" in 1987, "The Light house at the End of the World" in 1995 and "The Death and Life of Miguel de Cervantes" in 1996.

'24' imitator gets probation

ELVERSON (AP) — A college student from southern York County was given probation for repeatedly ramming his car into another man's vehicle, claiming the man was a terrorist and he was the character Jack Bauer, a federal agent on the Fox television show "24."

The victim, Marlon Cantoral, 30, provided a false address to police and never showed up to court, prompting prosecutors in Howard County, Md., just west of Baltimore, to enter into a plea deal with the student, Edgar Sullivan, 23, of Elverson.

Cantoral may have been living in the United States illegally, prosecutors said.

In court Thursday, Sullivan apologized for the incident, telling Howard County Circuit Judge Richard Bernhardt that he has been attending alcohol treatment and plans to graduate in May.

Brother of former Philly mayor convicted

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The eccentric older brother of Philadelphia's last mayor was convicted of three tax-evasion charges Friday but acquitted of four fraud counts over what prosecutors had described as a kickback scheme at the city-owned airport.

The jury, which deliberated for nearly three days, deadlocked on two other counts against T. Milton Street Sr.

Street, 68, had pleaded not guilty to all nine charges in an indictment that said he took advantage of his relationship with then-Mayor John F. Street to make $30,000 a month as a consultant and minority subcontractor at the airport from 2001 to 2004.

Prosecutors alleged he did little or no work and failed to report $2 million in consulting fees for tax purposes.
