Chapter 01:

Dusk...

At the morning assembly, Principal Bepo Adewale suddenly cannot talk. He walks to the podium looking sad and starts to cry in front of everyone.

The Vice Principal (Mrs. Grace Apeh) and other staff try to find out what is wrong, but Bepo does not say anything.

He is taken to his office, still weeping.

News of his strange behaviour reaches some parents and the Managing Director (MD), Mrs. Ibidun Gloss, is called to the school. She questions Bepo, but he only keeps saying, "I will be all right."

Even a pastor-teacher (Mr. Ope Wande) is invited to talk to him too, but Bepo still will not explain his problem.

The MD later learns that Bepo's wife now lives in London.

In the end, Bepo is asked to go home to rest.

Chapter 02:

The Enticement

We learn why Bepo was crying: he has decided to relocate (japa) to the United Kingdom.

His wife (Seri) and their two children (Nike and Kike) are already in the UK, and Seri has been pressuring him to join them.

But Bepo loves his job and his students at Stardom Schools, where he has worked for over 20 years and earned the nickname "The Lekki Headmaster".

His colleagues think he is foolish to be sad about such a "golden opportunity".

People compare his Nigerian salary to what he could earn in pounds in the UK.

But Bepo had wanted to start his own transport or private school business when he retired.

Chapter 03:

Migration Tales

Bepo starts researching what life is like for Nigerians who have moved abroad.

He learns about hourly wages in the UK, USA and Canada, and how much people can earn compared to Nigeria.

He hears stories of Nigerians selling everything to relocate.

Some borrowing money and never paying back.

And even people who stole to fund their travel.

His former colleague (Sola) who now lives in the UK, tells him about her experience — the good side like free healthcare and schools, and the opposite like low-paying jobs and expensive rent.

Not every migration story is a success; some people abroad struggle badly.

Chapter 04:

A Case of Visa Denied

A parent (Mrs. Ignatius) calls Bepo late at night to complain that her husband (Ibe) has not come home.

Their family had planned to relocate to London, but their visa was denied because a DNA test showed that Mr. Ignatius is not the biological father of one of their three children.

This discovery has caused serious trouble in the marriage, and Ibe threatens to leave his wife and the child who is not his.

This chapter shows another side of the japa dream — how family secrets can be exposed by the visa process and how emigration is not always simple or happy.

Chapter 05:

Snake in the Roof

During lunch break, the MD (Mrs. Ibidun Gloss), goes to inspect a piece of land that the school owns.

She is shocked to find many staff cars and big vehicles parked there secretly.

She fears that teachers are stealing school money to buy these cars.

She calls the accountant and principal to explain.

It turns out the money came from the school's staff cooperative society, which had grown very large — ₦95 million in the account, with ₦50 million loaned out.

Worried that the cooperative has become too powerful (like "a snake in the roof"), the board of directors decides to limit how much any staff member can borrow, to protect the school from future risk.
